ALLIED TROOPS CROSS INTO POKKON AREA-- UN WARNS RUSSIA OF AGGRESSION
UN troops crossed north Korea's Watchon Reservoir in rubber assault boats Saturday in an effort to seize vital Pookon Dam from the east, but the daring attempt failed under heavy Chinese counterattack.

BROTHERS MEET

First Sergeant James D. Garrison of the 193rd Field Artillery Battalion is responsible for bringing together two brothers in a reunion on the Korean battle front.

It all happened when Sergeant Garrison told Sergeant Claude Watson that he had heard of another Watson from Memphis, Tenn., serving with our regiment.

Sergeant Claude Watson, who knew that his brother Roy was in Korea, promptly came to the Buffalo C.P.

Sure enough there was brother Roy, a Private, in "A" Co. of the 17th.

"Hi Sergeant" yelled Roy, as he met his brother for the first time since late 1950.

"As you were", said Claude, patting Roy on the back, as they both began talking of old times.

The Americans landed before dawn, seized a firm beachhead and threw back several frantic Red attacks in bitter all day fighting. Earlier in the evening, however, the weight of number forced a withdrawal.

UN WARNS RUSSIA

Trigvje Lie served notice on Russia and her satellites Sunday that the UN would step in quickly with troops and guns to block a new "Korea" in Yugoslavia.

The UN Secretary-General told a news conference the world organization will help Yugoslavia, in the event of aggression in the same way it helped South Korea repel the invasion of the North Korean Communists. Lie said: "There can be no veto against the UN's decision to fight aggression in any part of the world."
